

April:

Autism Acceptance Month

Did You Know?

KBKG/KROST DE&I COMMITTEE EXPLAINS

We celebrate Autism Awareness Month in April to educate communities and ultimately raise awareness about autism. The Autism Society held its first National Autism Awareness month in April of 1970, over 50 years ago. Autism is now the fastest growing developmental disability in the world. The diagnosis rate of children with autism increased from 1 in every 2000 children back in the 70's and 80's to now, 1 in every 68 children.

April 2nd kicks off a month of events and is also known as World Autism Day. There are several communities throughout the US that hold fundraisers, such as awareness walks.

Puzzle pieces and the color blue are global symbols for Autism Spectrum Disorder. Through these continual awareness efforts, there are a variety of children's books to start important conversations as well.

There are many ways to get involved in the global discussion surrounding autism. Simply click on the link below.

We want to know about your traditions, customs, and cultural recipes.
